

Code of Ethics and Conduct

Thai Reinsurance Public Company Limited and its subsidiaries are committed to operating business in an ethical manner and with responsibility towards all stakeholder groups. Therefore, the Company has prepared this code of ethics and conduct for the directors, executives and employees of the Company and its subsidiaries to abide by in business operation.

Code of Ethics

The Company shall conduct business in a moral and ethical manner towards the organization, outsiders and all groups of stakeholders.

Code of Conduct

Code of conduct refers to the best practices for business operation and the rules one should follow in the discharge of his/her duty.

The Company has formulated the code of best practices clearly and adequately to prevent any misconduct, create a good role model and maintain responsibility towards all stakeholder groups. This attests to its strong determination and desire for the directors, executives and employees to perform their duties under the framework for morality, righteousness, integrity, equality, legal compliance and adherence to the Company's Articles of Association in order for the Company to achieve the objectives of business operation. Details of the code of best practices are as follows:

Code of Best Practices

1. Best practices for general management

- Always be aware that, in discharging duty, one has an obligation and accountability not only towards the Company, supervisors, directors and shareholders who are owners, but also towards customers, fellow employees, society and the environment, and must therefore pay attention to common interest of all groups of stakeholders and be accountable for his/her performance and the performance of his/her subordinates.
- Always seek to improve and enhance one's knowledge and capability and study various technologies or technical knowledge for personal development.
- Do not harm, destroy or undermine, directly or indirectly, the reputation, prosperity or business of the others.
- Treat others with morality, righteousness, compassion and recognition of human rights, personal dignity and equality, and, when being asked for opinion on one's own work, express opinion in an impartial and reliable manner.

2. Best practices for business operation

- Perform any assigned duty under a lawful policy with integrity and loyalty and without seeking any advantage to which one is not entitled or jeopardizing the Company's image or reputation.
- Devise plans and determine and analyze operational targets of a work unit, of oneself and of subordinates in order to attain objectives of the organization by paying regard to righteousness, professional conduct, and corporate culture.
- Use one's leadership, coordinate and implement all actions with professional knowledge and capability in the best interest of the Company rather than for personal benefit.
- Enhance the discharge of duty under a standard operating system and efficient control system by profoundly and carefully using one's knowledge and capability with adequate information and reliable evidence.
- Encourage coordination and promote a pleasant work environment, while upholding discipline in and outside the organization.
- Respect "confidential information" that is accessible due to one's position and do not use such information for one's personal benefit or for the benefit of its department which he/she is attached to or for the organization he/she used to work with.
- When there is any personal interest arising other than that received from the Company, disclose all factual details of such interest immediately to one's supervisor and do not engage in any other business that may create a conflict of interest with the Company or may undermine the efficiency in the discharge of one's duty.
- Seek proper and suitable measures for the protection and security of the Company's properties that are under one's responsibility.
- In expressing or providing any statement to the public, clearly identify as to whether:
 - the statement is a personal opinion or is given in any other corporate position;
 - such statement or opinion may create benefit to any group of persons in which one also has an interest.

3. Best practices towards employees in the organization

- All employees are deemed as the key business drivers, to every one of whom the Company has given importance on a non-discriminatory basis.
- Avoid and eradicate any misunderstanding about problems arising from labor relations that could cause corporate or interpersonal dissension.
- Interact with fellow employees impartially with mutual respect and equitable treatment on a non-discriminatory basis, and foster teamwork and unity among directors, executives and employees.

- Be respectful to the colleagues and no sexual harassment whether by visual, verbal, physical or other actions about sex that dislike by the victim.
 - Be attentive to fellow employees' way of life and well-being and give importance to a happy work environment.
 - Assess subordinates' knowledge and competence and develop those who have the potential for promotion to a higher position, including one's own position.
 - Appropriate and reasonable remuneration and other benefit which can be compared with the same industry.
4. Best practices towards shareholders
- Encourage the shareholders to receive sufficient and appropriate information by the disclosure of important information, both financial and non-financial information to shareholders, accurately, completely and in time.
 - Recognize the rights and equality of all shareholders including focus on the business efficiency for appropriate and sustainable returns.
 - Report accurate and complete information, news and Company's status to all shareholders on a regularly and equally basis at the right time and sufficient for decision making.
 - Grant the rights to shareholders to propose comments or complaints on Company's operations via the channels specified on the Company website. Every comment will be screened for submission to the Board of Directors or related parties and the result shall be informed accordingly.
5. Best practices towards customers, business partners, competitors, creditors, public sector and outsiders

The Company adheres to the code of conduct towards customers, business partners, competitors, creditors and the public sector, and operates business with integrity and equality under the following best practices:

Best practices towards customers

- Treat customers in a fair and non-discriminatory manner and avoid any improper acts.
